

MASTER OF ARTS IN LINGUISTICS (M.A.)

Purpose

The Master of Arts in Linguistics program equips students with the knowledge, skills, and ability for understanding the unique inter-working of languages and the components that make up linguistic study. It will prepare students for theoretical and applied study in the field as they are equipped for opportunities in teaching, translation, advanced education, or vocational enterprise.

Program Learning Outcomes

The student will be able to:

- Analyze the history of language-its development and adaptation.
- Explain the role of the different branches of linguistics in language development.
- Evaluate the interrelated nature of grammatical structures in linguistics.
- Apply findings from the research and knowledge of the literature in linguistics to society and Christian service.
